CHILD LOVE. Many have loved me, I have loved my fill; Not mulmpranioned bath my life course run; Yet sometimes, when the voices small and still, Come whispering softly from the c'or and done With tears, regrets, and blighted longings laden, As wandering night sire with mysterious dow. My soul strains backward to the simple maiden, The one Child love that did my heart transfuse With love's first exultation 1 and I'm fain In doom I ne er shall feel such love again, We were too young to speak or think of love, But such on each a subtle influence bore. Housed in my boy's breast, like a firstling dove, Else care-bereit, her tinnid trust gave o'er Remoter seeking; while a glance from her Was rainbow to my spirit when at atorm. And, as with older lovers, in the stir. Of shy attentions, with requitals warm, We regard our little love flower carelessly ---Thoughtless of what its future bloom might be. Death found her deaming, like a weary flower, And placked her occahe woke. Soor busy life Flowed in between; and drostine of fame and power Maturer loves, the heyday of the strife. And all the fleeting imagery of Change Have swort across the little grave since then Yot still my thoughts through all the vistas range
